Bloomington Public Schools Celebrate Life of Dred Scott

Students at Bloomington Jefferson and Kennedy high schools will view a living history presentation on the life of Dred Scott later this month. It's part of a program from the United States District Court.

Scott, who was an African-American slave sued for his freedom in the 1840's. His case helped motivate the anti-slavery movement and contributed to the start of the Civil War.

The presentation will be in the Jefferson auditorium on April 25 at 8:10 a.m.
